In yer cup.

I was late to work this morning because T. and I went to stand in line.

There's a three-day waiting period. What're you doing on Saturday?

Maybe we can get married in every state in the union, one at a time!

Oh. OH! DUH!

I am TOTALLY free on Saturday!

(Also, a three-day waiting period? Maybe if you explained you'd done this twice before with the same partner, so you were pretty sure you really, really did want to get married, they'd make an exception?)

Also, I want to be there when someone says, "We'll need a copy of your marriage license," and you say, "Which one?"

We could wallpaper!

is it bigamy if you keep doing it with the same person?

"is it bigamy if you keep doing it with the same person?"

Isn't there an old Groucho Marx punchline about that somewhere? Some sort of response to Margaret Dumont?

In any case, yay! So nice when the power structure catches up to reality.

3-day waiting period? Is this a marriage licence or a concealed carry permit?

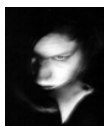

You will be licensed to carry your spouse with you in an ankle holster.

Another of my friends just linked to this gallery, thought you might enjoy it if you hadn't seen it yet:

This has me smiling.

(Does this mean three sets of wedding presents? grin)

Congratulations! You're now tied with some friends of mine who got married once in India, once for the legal US wedding to deal with the paperwork, and then the big ceremonial US wedding.

One marriage for every state sounds absolutely wonderful.

You could celebrate your anniversaries that way. "OK, dear, where shall we get married for out twelfth anniversary?" "Oh, I don't know, how does Minnesota sound?" "How does the weather look there that time of year?"
